BHE Series
Articulated Arms
INSTRUCTIONS

Introduction

Thank you for choosing the Impact BHE Series Articulated Arm. Often used in conjunction with a super clamp, articulated arms can mount a camera, small light fixture, or light modifier onto anything a super clamp can fit around. The arms will also fit into any baby receiver. Applicable whether you're on location or in the studio, an articulated arm is versatile, extendable, and secure, with locking and sliding arm components.

With a camera bracket (Impact BHE-104, sold separately) on the arm, you can mount your compact, mirrorless, or DSLR camera on anything from a riser to a bicycle to capture unique angles or points of view. Often used for time lapse photos, articulated arms are also great for action and sports photography.

Made from durable and lightweight aluminum, all Impact BHE Series Articulated Arms feature 5/8" spigots. Each single articulated arm has either a 1/4"-20 or a 3/8" threaded socket. Each double articulated arm has a 3/8" threaded socket on one end and a hexagonal double anchor stud on the other end. This gives the arm added strength in a super clamp. You can adjust the angle and extension of each section of the arms and tighten both at once with a single locking knob.

Note: Always check weight limits and load capacity before attaching to location site.
